

Back to 5th Grade

Justin Miller and I, Kerry Li, both novice reporters, decided to interview Ms. Zeoli, a 5th grade teacher, for this week's newspaper article. We decided to interview her because room 221 (my class) has been seeing a lot of her for the first couple weeks of school.

Ms. Zeoli's hometown is not too far from Mill Creek, it's actually Philadelphia! Originally, Ms. Zeoli sought to be a veterinarian (animal doctor), but we later found out that when she saw a needle, she would almost faint. So, instead of being a vet, she turned to education, and started her career as a teacher.

Mill Creek Elementary is not the first school that Ms. Zeoli has taught at, she taught at several other schools before Mill Creek, including St. Albert the Great. This is her second year teaching at Mill Creek. She enjoys teaching the 5th grade, but she also has a favorite teaching subject. Her favorite lessons to teach are in writing, writing is her most preferred subject because her students can express themselves clearly and make their ideas available to others.

Justin Miller and I both had great time interviewing Ms. Zeoli. We hope you had fun reading our newspaper article, and writing this newspaper brought back very good memories about 5th grade. We wish Ms. Zeoli another wonderful year at Mill Creek, congratulations for surviving the first!
